

Golf Instruction at Georgetown Country Club 2010

Playing great golf requires much more than patience and practice. Perfecting your game involves constant critique and analysis of how you are using your strength, flexibility, and natural talent to improve your game. Lessons at Georgetown Country Club are conducted by Director of Instruction, Tim Strickland, a PGA Class A Golf Professional.

Tim Strickland draws golfers from the Ann Arbor area and Georgetown Country Club. In the future these golfers will learn that Tim brings skill, knowledge, and patience necessary to fine-tune their game and shave those extra strokes.

The basics behind the teachings of this instructor are “Keep it Simple”. The students need to have feedback while getting instruction, but in a way that the student can learn and not to be forced into certain swing. Tim likes to assist the student with his/her swing and fine tune it so that the game of golf can more enjoyable to players of all abilities.

Tim's Teaching Philosophy:

- Stress the basic fundamentals
  - Grip/Posture/Alignment, or in other words Getting/Prepared/Accurately
  - Basic fundamentals build a solid foundation
- Develop a swing that fits each individual's body structure, strength, and flexibility
- Tim's goal is to help each individual understand his or her game and become confident
  - Last but not least "Have Fun" & "Keep it Simple"
